On Council Of Ireland

At Talks Between Wilson, Cosgrave

By Richard Eder

LONDON, April 5 (NYT) -Britain and the Republic of Ireland have agreed to move quickly to set up a Council of Ireland. despite the overwhelming opposition by Ulster Protestants shown a in the recent elections.

This decision emerged after a meeting here today between British Prime Minister Harold Wilson and Irish Premier Liam Congrave. Mr. Cosgrave's visit to London, for which security was the heavy, afforded the first opportunity for such a meeting since Mr. Wilson became prime

The talks were aimed at removing some of the strains that have developed in British-Irish unity over the Ulster question since the signing last autumn of a tripartite agreement on the Sunningdale, near London.

From a communiqué issued after the meeting and from a " - press conference given afterward by Mr. Cosgrave, it became clear that both sides had decided to move shead to formalize the sunningdale agreement. Mr. Cosgrave indicated that formal ratification might come as early as May.

Sharing of Power

CALL THE

Sunningdale provided for a provincial legislature and executive in which power was shared Protestants and Catholics. This is already operating. Among other things, it also called for more effective security measures and for a Council of Ireland, a body of limited functions in which both North and South would be represented.

Protestant opposition in Northproposed someon which they see as a stepping-stone to a united areland. This opposition resulted in hard-line Protestants sweeping 11 out of 12 Northern Treland constituencies in the Eritish general election Feb. 28. Brian Faulkner, leader of the Northern Treland Executive and of the reduced band of northern Protestant politicians who support Sunningdale, has urged delay in setting up the Council of Ireland. The Irish government adamantly opposes postponement and the British government has now agreed that the whole structure of cooperation set up at Sunningdale, however frail, would be wrecked unless it is fully implemented. In return for this decision, the Irish have agreed to move quick-ly to insure that Irish Republican Army men who flee from Northern Ireland into the republic will not be able to receive asylum. A Dublin-Belfast law commission is to recommend soon is to be done. The choice appears to be between extradition and allowing Irish Republic courts to try persons accused of terrorist offenses committed in Northern Ireland Mr. Cosgrave said that legislation adopting the commission's suggestions would be put through quickly.

India, Pakistan, Bangladesh Meet to Discuss Normal Ties

By Bernard Weinraub

NEW DELHI, April 5 (NYT) .--The foreign ministers of India, Pakistan and Bangladesb met today in a delicate effort to ease frictions and shape normal ties among the three nations. It was their first tripartite meeting. At issue were two key problems: the fate of 195 Pakiatani prisoners of war and the repatriation of the displaced Bihari minority-or non-Bengali Moslem community—in Bangla-desh. The settlement of both issues is a key to normal relations on the subcontinent. The meeting, to last through the weekend, is expected to serve as the preliminary for a meeting of the subcontinent's three leaders: Prime Ministers Indira Gandhi of India, Zulfikar Ali Bhutto of Pakistan and Mujfbur Rahman of Bangladesh.

Since the India-Pakistan war in 1971 and the creation of Bangladesh, formerly the eastern wing of Pakistan, the struggle to heal the tensions on the subcontinent has proved difficult.

It was only after the "Delhi Agreement" in August-which mvolved the repatriation of most Pakistanl prisoners of war-that the three nations began seeking to work out coherent diplomatic links. The normalization of ties accelerated in February when Pakistan recognized Bangladesh during the conference of Moslem nations in Labore.

Tonight, officials said that today's meeting got off to a "good, hopeful start." An Indian spokesman said the three delegations discussed "implementation" of the Delhi Agreement. "They also discussed further steps that will have to be taken under that agreement," he said.

Today and yesterday, the Pakistani delegation here, led by Aziz Ahmed, minister of state for foreign affairs, maintained that the fate of the 195 prisoners was the key issue of the tripartite meeting. What the Pakistanis want is a public acknowledgment that the prisoners will not be placed on trial.

Most Political Leaders See Tax Issue Damaging Nixon

By David S. Broder

WASHINGTON, April 5 (WP).

—President Nixon's back tax payment of about $465,000 will leave his public support as shaky as his bank balance, most political leaders said yesterday.

Vientiane and Luang

The Pathet Lao apparently expects that its superior ability at political organizing will allow it to do well in the coming elec-

Republican National Chairman George Bush and a few other party loyalists asserted that the American people will "compli-ment" Mr. Nixon for paying, rather than contesting, the claim flied Wednesday by the Internal Revenue Service.

But most Republicans and virtually all Democrats contacted in an informal survey agreed that the settlement on taxes owed during the first four years of his presidency was "obviously damaging" to the embattled chief

That assessment was made by Sen, William Brock 3d of Tennessee, the chairman of the Republican Senatorial Campaign Committee. Predicting that there'll be a negative reaction on the part of the American public," Sen. Brock said it was "helpful" that Mr. Nixon had kept his pledge to "pay whatever was due without any quibbling. "But," he concluded, "I think this has been obviously damag-

More Hopeful View

That comment was echoedwith minor variations—by almost all other Republican and Democratic campaign officials questioned. But Mr. Bush, the top Republican spokesman, took a more hopeful yiew.

"It appears the President got lousy tax advice," he said, "but to his credit, he said to get it

"He took one tremendous financial wallop," Mr. Bush said, "a lot more than his lawyers feel he really owes. But no fraud has been alleged; both Democrats and Republicans on the I joint internal revenue] committee have complimented him: and I think the American people will, too. Democratic National Cha Robert Strauss said the tax bill would have "an adverse political impact" on Mr. Nixon, even though "there is nothing to indicate any lilegality in the findings.

"I just think this is an issue the public will react to," Mr. Strauss said. 'Fairly or unfairly, that's the political fact of life."

Some politicians related anecdotes indicating there already is such a reaction. Sen. Lloyd Bent-sen of Texas, the chairman of the Democratic Senatorial Campaign Committee, who was in Ohio for a epecch, said he had been asked by an elevator operator, "What kind of deal is it when I pay more taxes than the Pres-Sen. Bentsen said he thought Mr. Nixon'e decision to pay the amout claimed, rather than take the case to court, "will cut both ways. It may have moderated the criticism to a degree, but it was obviously an admission he had taken deductions that weren't proper. I'd have to say it hurt his position." Rep. Wayne Hays of Ohio. the hairman of the Democratic Congressional Campaign Comittee, reported a phone call from an angry constituent, a businessman, who urged him 'to intro-duce a bill saying nobody has to pay his taxes until he gets caught, and then there's no penalty.

"The average citizen understands this tax business more than he does Watergate," Rep. Hays said. "I don't see how it can help him."

Disagreeing somewhat, Rep. Robert Michel of Illinois, the chairman of the Republican Congressional Campaign Com-mittee, said Mr. Nixon's decision to pay the bill "sure as heck helps the altustion."

"He gambled and lost and now he has to pay the piper." Rep. Micbel remarked, "but I was sure happy to see he decided not to fight this thing down to the wire, as he had a right to

Opinions Vary NEW YORK, April 5 (AP) -In random interviews some Americans took misery-loves-company delight in Mr. Nixon's tax plight Others saw the news as reinforcement for their beliefs that Mr. Nixon should be impeached. And still others saw the whole thing as Mr. Nixon being victimized by his political opponents or by his tax attorneys.

"Hurrah, hurrah, hurrah," said Joseph Sardella, 53, a Republican and a carpet cleaner from North Hollywood, Calif.

"Agnew resigned because of something like this, But Nixon stays in office. What's good for one crook is good for another, Mr Sardella said

"I think it's the best thing that ever happened to this country," said Mike Erlichman of Miami. "I had to pay more taxes on my lousy $10,000 a year than he paid on $200,000. That just isn't right." Mr. Erlichman, 59, a registered Democrat, is a retired postal employee and a bank messenger. New Yorker Ronald Mastracco lican, attributed the whole thing to politics.

'The whole issue is a matter of political climate," Mr. Ma-stracco said. "If he weren't under attack, and his administration wasn't utterly mismanaged the tax issue would never have come up in the first place."

Bid to Congress To Curb Nixon in Event of a Trial

WASHINGTON, April 5 (IHT). Rep. Les Aspin D-Wis. yes-terday introduced three resolu-tions in Congress that are intended to prevent President Nixon from creating a crisis or signing env treaties with foreign nations during an impeachment trial.

"Congress should begin now to prepare for the effects impeach ment will heve nn our national security." he said in a House speech. The three resolutions, he said are designed to keep the Pres-dent from playing fast and loose with our national security during an impeachment trial and to make sure at the same time that no foreign power tries to take ed-vantage of the situation." Rep. Aspin continued: "We can-not doubt that there is at less the possibility that international politics will become impeachment politics-and it is clear the dangers this could hold for all of

One of his resolutions would make it impossible for the President to "create or exaggerate a crisis for his own ends," Rep. Aspin said. It would require regular briefings for congressional leaders by the Central Intelligence Agency and the secretaries of defense and state.

The two others would advise President Nixon that he should not sign any treaties or executive agreements with foreign powers or make any state visits abroad uring an impeachment trial

Maheu Says Hughes Gare $100,000

Court Told That Humphrey Knew of Gift

By Gene Blake

LOS ANGELES, April 5.-For-mer Vice-President Hubert Humphrey knew he was to receive Howard Hughes's contributions of $50,000 in cash and $50,000 by check in 1968 and was aware the currency was in a bag delivered to his limousine, Robert A. Maheu testified yesterday.

Sen. Humphrey, D-Minn, said in Washington that Mr. Maheu's account was "fantasy and sheer poppycock and I'm weary of hearing about it."

Mr. Maheu, deposed chief of Mr. Hughes's Nevada operations, told a federal court jury here that the commitment for the contributions was made at a meeting he had with Sen. Humphrey in Denver. A Humpbrey camp aide has testified he ushered Mr. Maheu into such a meeting on May 5, 1968, but the senator denied yesterday that he was even in Denver that day.

"From the on, we had several conversations by telephone and the matter was handled very delicately." Mr. Maheu testified.

At the time, Mr. Hughes was concerned about underground nuclear testing being conducted by the Atomic Energy Commission in Nevada, near where the billionaire industrialist had begun to acquire gambling casinos and other properties.

"He [Sen, Humphrey] certainly indicated he would give us all the help we needed in our fight relative to atomic energy and he seemed very grateful," Mr. Maheu

He said that the cash was de-Evered following a fund-raising dinner July 29, 1968, at the Cen-tury Plaza Hotel here. He said he first spoke to Sen. Humphrey about it during the cocktail hour preceding the dinner.

"I mentioned to the Vice-President I had with me the item we had discussed previously." Mr. Mahen testified. "He seemed happy."

Mr. Maheu said he iearned from a Humphrey side—whom he could not identify—that the delivery was to be made to the Vice-President's limousine in front of the hotel.

He testified that he got his cash-filled briefcase from his room and boarded the limousine in front of the hotel main en-trance. He said be spent no

"I made some reference to the atomic energy problems which Howard Hughes wanted curtailed in Nevada." Mr. Maheu related. "I left the briefcase on the floor of the limousine, bade the Vice-President Godspeed, said goodbye to his wife and I left."

Mr. Mahen testified that he did not open the briefcase, that he referred to its contents only as some papers pertaining to atomi energy problems" and did not mention a political contribution.

Schlesinger Cites Conditions

U.S. A-Arms Cuts in Europe Hinted

By Dan Morgan

WASHINGTON, April 5 (WP). — Defense Secretary James Schlesinger said in Congress yesterday that the 7,000 American nuclear warheads in Europe could be reduced in number certain circumstances," provided there were consultation with allied governments.

His assessment was part of a long review of American nuclear strategy which revealed the complexities and interlocking uncertainties that confront policymakers in this field.

In the process, Mr. Schlesinger gave a somewhat more reassuring picture of Soviet-American strategic arous limitation talks than had emerged after Secretary of State Henry Kissinger's recent trip to Moscow.

He said the Russians should produced an "improved understanding" on both sides and added that "there is momentum." But in answer to the questions of Senate Foreign Relations Com-mittee members, he repeated his concern that the Russians have introduced a missile development program with the "potential" to give them a strategic advantage. He said the Russians should consider the wisdom of embarking on a course that will cost billions of dollars, surely force an American response and ultimately reduce Soviet security. The open bearings were beld under the joint auspices of the Arms Control subcommittee head-ed by Sen. Edmund Muskie, D-Maine, and the U.S. Security Agreements and Commitments Abroad sobcommittee, headed by Sen. Stuart Symington, D-Mo.

They produced the first public indication that the United States is reviewing its deployment in Europe of 7,000 land-based tactical nuclear warbeads that can be delivered by aircraft, missiles or

Mr. He received exactly what any good citizen should-prompt and Schlesinger denied that this could be a consequence of his policy. He told the senators that West German officials have consistentsought assurances that the United States would use such weapons in Germany's defense.

Senators who questioned the defense secretary indicated puzzlement about the intentions behind Soviet development of large new missiles capable of carrying four to eight individual warheads to different targets.

Sen. Mustic said he is "troubled" by timese programs, but added that the United States, in respending to the Soviet moves. should take care to study all possible alternatives so as not to "fuel the arms race." "Are we locked in some kind of senseless paradox where detente is irreversible, but so is the armarace?" he asked.

35-nation European Security Conference began a three-week Easter recess today with any final agreement still uncertain although negotiations are running four months behind sched-

Western officials said that the Soviet Union, which initiated the conference last year, is still refusing to make any concessions on greater freedom of movement for both people and information across frontiers.

"We have nothing to be proud of in what has been accomplished so far," the head of Switzerland's delegation. Ambassador Rudolf Bindschelder, said. The conference, attended by all European countries except Albania plus the United States and Canada, began in September. It was initially supposed to end by December with either heads of state or foreign ministers signing a final document this spring.

Western officials said that kioscow has refused to buoge on the buman liberties issue in re-turn for Western concessions on the Sovict aim of having existing political frontiers formally recognized as permanent, Among other things, such a Western concession would rule out any eventual German reunification or other peaceful border changes.

Western officials said the Russians bave lately started to give way on minor questions, mainly concerning wording.

Smothered as Ethnic Group

French Laws, Social Pressures Imperil Gypsy Style of Life

PARIS, April 5 (Reuters) .-Harassed for centuries, persecuted hy the Nams during World War II and still considered undesirable hy a majority of the population, Gypsies still endeavor to pursua their nomadic existence in France. Life has become increasingly tough for the Gypsies, who are slowly smothered as an ethnic group by modern civilization and its resulting restraints.

They now find it extremely difficult if not impossible to camp on the outskirts of towns or on waste land in the country.

Highways disfiguring landscapes, blocks of low-cost apartment buildings sprouting around big cities, and above all recent legislation practically outlawing the nomadic way of life, have contributed to the problems of at least 100,000 Gypsies in France. Several tribes have been scattered. Many have been compelled to leave the Paris region, where they have lived for centuries. Others have moved to seemingly untroubled places, hoping that their situation will improve.

A resolution calling for a halt to discrimination against 300.000 Gypsies living in the 18 member countries of the Council of Europe was adopted in September, 1969, by the council's consultative assembly. But the council's rec- is married and has five children, ommendations have remained now lives near the Paris Flea almost a dead letter here. Spenish and Catalan Gypsies and the Roms, the Sintis, the Manouches and the Yeniches, form the main groups of nomads living in France. The Manouches usually sell second-hand goods or collect scrap metals. The Roms end the Sintis are better known as craftamen. The Yeniches mostly peddle goods near provincial towns while the Spanish and Catalan Gypsies tend to he less organized with many of them reduced to begging, especially in

The French Association of Gypsy Studies sounded an alarm recently hy saying in a report that a law passed in December, 1972, which practically outlawed peddling and door-to-door selling, seriously compromised the , future of Gypsies.

Litvinov Says Dissidents Are Moral Force in Russia

AMSTERDAM, April 5 (AP) .--Pavel Litvinov admltted yesterday that he and fellow Soviet dissidents are "few and powerless" and said their "goal is not life acquisition of political power but the exercise of a moral and spiritual force."

Mr. Litvinor, who is spending a few days in Amsterdam before leaving Monday for the United States, said at a press conference that he is "neither a politician nor an idealist, hut someone interested in human rights."

The 33-year-old chemical engincer left Moscow with his wife and two children March, 18, after the Soviet secret police told him he could "cither go West or back to the cast Imeaning Siberial."

Mr. Litrinov, the grandson of a Soviet foreign minister under Stallin, Maxim Litvinor, speut four years in Siberiau exile after participating in a demonstration against the Sorlet-led invasion of Czechoslm'akia in 1968.

Decrying the term "dissident." Mr. Litrinov seld that wurd gives the impression that one thinks differently than others." while what he and other Soviet dissenters are dolng is "defend-ing the right of people to think in the first place."

"The normal social feelings of our people have heen annihilated by the constant stream of blood and lies which has flowed over the Soviet Union during the last decades," he said.

"There has been a hardening of their hearts, We are trying to repair their moral feelings. But we realize that moral conviction has not much to do with practicality or the chance of Mr. Litymov said that intellectuals were not the only ones dis-satisfied with life in the Soviet Unioo, "There are other groups which are dissatisfied with such things as the low standard of ilv-ing and poor medical care.

"Religious groups and national groups are also dissatisfied. But only the intelligentsia have the power to make themselves heard." even if they are "dependent upon the Western press for a hearing."

zation last night dissociated itself from statements attributed to its representatives in London, sald Hammami.

Mr. Hammani was quoted by the Loodon Jewish Chronicle as enging that PLO leader Yassir Arafat was prepared to live in harmony with Israel provided a Palestinian state is formed. He also said there must be two states in Palestine, one Israell, one Palestinian.

Commenting ou the report, a PLO spokesman said that Mr. Hammaml's quoted remarks "do not reflect PLO views."

The spokesman reiterated that "the strategic aim sought by the PLO is the establishment of n democratic Palestinian state on all Palestinian territory where all - Moslems, Christians and Jewscan coexist in equality, justice and brotherhood without discrimination, racism or faschm."

"What are the sources of the 'pessimism' of The New York Times and The Washington Post, as well as of some other news-papers?" Prayda asked. "Are we not witnesses of disguised sabotage of the development of the Soviet-American dialogue?"

'Observers' Quoied Tite paper's Washington correspondent, Boris Strelnikov, asserted that some "local political bservers" were coovinced that Yes, be have obvious political sabotage." In an authoritative Prayda commentary, quoting unidentified observers is a standard way of presenting the Kremlin's own view. The sharpness of the attack indicated the sensitivity of the leadership headed by Mr. Brezh-nev, and presumably of Mr. Brezhnev personally, to any public indications that the Kremlin's détente policy was in trouble in

Some Western European spc cialists suggested that the commentary might also have been intended by the Brezhnev group as a warning to internal hard-liners not to push too hard on some issues because this would raise insurmountable obstacles in Washington.

Pravds said that a "motley coalition" had come out against development of Soviet-American relations, including "representa-tives of the military-industrial complex, extreme rightist organizations, Zionist circles and their agents in the American Congress." The Soviet press attacks the "military-industrial complex" almost daily while simultaneously printing reports of intense interest in Soviet-American trade by targe U.S. corporations, many of them leading defense contractors.

Pope Asks Funds To Save Church In Holy Land

VATICAN CITY, April 5 (UPI).

Promoter of the Faith. The Rev. Rafael Perez, however, is more familiarly known as the devil's advocate. And he is a very husy man these days because of pressures from various parts of the world to have local candidates beatified or canonized for the Holy Year of 1975.

Active and energetic at 72, Father Perez scems hardly the type of person to carry the somewhat fearsome title, which derives from his role in examining the backgrounds of candidates for

Around the Vatican, some priests refer jocularly to Father Perez and his four assistants as "the devil's advocate and his little devils."

A nun, who is a member of an order whose late leader has been proposed for heatification, was heard to remark of the kindly Father Perez: "How can he be so cruel as to try to find something wrong with our heloved mother-founder?"

"I am not an enemy of saintly people," Father Perez said, "nor are we working night and day to destroy their candidactes. But it is our job to make sure that everything is done according to canon law. "And in this way, we insure that there are no gaps or false in-formation in the candidate's Cause."

When a candidate is proposed for sainthood, by the local bishop ur the religious order to which be belonged or, in the case of Pope John XXIII, by the Vatican itself, a postulator of the "cause" is appointed. He is charged with compiling the evidence of the candidate's "heroic sanctity": a holy life, saintly disposition and mir-

Toward that end, Father Pcrez's office is jammed with huge scarlet hinders containing the files on about 1,200 candidates for sainthood.

The postulator presents his evidence and the promoters of the faith respond in a separate report called "Difficulties and Controversies" on their reading of the evidence.

"We look into the candidate's whole life," Father Perez said. "He may have done great things when he was 50 or 60, hat what about earlier? We compare the various pertinent texts and witnesses. We attempt to illuminate obscure phases of his career.

"Contemporary candidates are casier to investigate. It is very difficult to get precise information about causes dating four or five centuries back."

Europe After Pompidou

Georges Pompidou, as President of France. did his country the great service of demonstrating that its political system could survive without De Gaulle. It needs to be remembered that in 1969, when Mr. Pompidoo came to power, the dominant party in French politics and the constitution itself had been built around one gigantic and unique figure. A very great man like Gen. de Gaulie raises troubling questions for a democracy, whose citizens have to wonder how they will get along when he is gone. Under Mr. Pompidou, France got along well. There was no slipping back into the weaknesses and confusions of the 1950s. Since the supply of great men is short, democracles owe a large debt to those men who can make things run by shrewd intelligence rather than by heroic vision. The death of Mr. Pompidou hrings into question once again the future of the Gauilist movement, now one political generation removed from its founder. The coming presidential election, therefore, comes at a particularly uncertain moment for the French government.

To most Frenchmen, the Pompidou years will probably be memorable less for politics than for great and sustained economic growth. To put it in comparative terms, these were the years in which it became clear that France's national wealth was going to he substantially greater than that of its old rival, Britain. In many respects the French standard of living was higher than that of its larger and more heavily industrialized neighbor, West Germany, But now France's inflation rate is high and accelerating. The enormous growth of foreign trade has left France, like all of the industrial countries. more vulnerable to world trends that no one nation can control. The enormous increases in the price of oil, now France's basic fuel and nearly all of it imported, casts a shadow over the country's very high level of pros-

For the rest of Europe, and for the United States, it matters a very great deal how the next French government goes about protecting that new prosperity, President Pompidou permitted the admission of Britain to the Common Market but stuhbornly resisted any further integration of the European Comnunity. In collaboration with the previous British government, the French successfully prevented any joint European resistance to the Arahs' initial oil emhargoes last fall. Subsequently France blocked the collaboration of oil-consuming countries that the United States attempted to organize. Instead it proceeded with plans for an explicitly European relationship with the Arabs. But now that initiative is blocked. The new British government has made consultation with the United States a condition for the conference hetween the Common Market and the Arabs. The French responded this week hy vetoing that proposal for transatlantic consultation. The result seems to he a complete stalemate.

This stalemate goes considerably beyond oli. The dispute over oil is only the most obvious and urgent of the long, tedious 11st of economic and diplomatic issues on which the Common Market is now stuck fast. The ldea of a European monetary union has been all but abandoned. The program to develop hackward regions has been stalled all winter. The more apprehensive the European governments become about inflation and unemployment, the less willing they seem to be to trust each other. These issues are now being forced by the determination of the new British government to renegotiate the terms under which Britain entered the Common Market. While the British have not made clear precisely what changes they seek. and perhaps are not entirely decided themselves, one obvious target is the Common Market's agricultural policy. It benefits above all the French farmer, and France has never shown any willingness to change it. The number and importance of these disputes begins to raise the question whether there is going to be a Common Market in anything more than name.

France still has a greater infloence over European politics than any other nation, particularly at this moment. Britain is under a minority government and, in West Germany, Chancellor Willy Brandt's Social Democrats have suffered sharp losses in the last three consecutive state elections. The next French president will have to set out the condition on which compromises can he worked out, if there are going to he any compromises at all. If not, then governments will have to start work on their own solutions to the economic issues that they were supposed to undertake jointly through the Common Market, Here again, the experience of the oil crisia does not offer any very hopeful precedent. The oil kept flowing through the winter hut, in retrospect, it is hard to believe that there was ever much danger of a general emhargo against all of the Arahs' European customers. The Arah governments were under a little too much pressure to keep earning foreign exchange. Now the Europeans are paying the new prices without having any very clear strategy for financing them. If the European policy toward the Arabs last winter could he described as calculated disunity, the present state of the oil trade certainly does little to huild a case for it.

The stiff insistence on French precedence and national interest is authentic Gaullism. But the circumstances are changing. To many Americans, for example, the French fears of an oppressive American hegemony in European politics will seem profoundly ironic. In view of Mr. Nixon's deteriorating position here at home, it seems hardly likely that the European friends of the United States will find themselves suffering from any excessive zeal or push in American policy as the months go by. The larger danger is the opposite one. But not many Europeans are really aware of the scale of Mr. Nixon's troubles, and the old reflexes against the idea of American control still

The present French government is less correct in assuming that its deliberately abrasive foreign policy is generally popular. But the French election this spring will put that assumption to the test a good deal more abruptly than anyone was expecting. It is too much to suggest that the fate of the Common Market depends upon the outcome of this election alone. But it is probably true that the next French government will decide whether the Market is to he anything more than a rudimentary customs union, and whether Western Europe will he able to deal as a unified region with the United life for weeks past have suddenly sharpened and intensified, following the initial report a few days ago of the independent investigation into the nation's deficient preparedness on the eve of the October war. The outlook for Premier Goida Meir and her key cabinet partner. Defense Minister Moshe Dayan, appears more tenuous with each passing day.

The leaders of Israel's armed forces responded with commendable respect for their country's democratic traditions on learning that they were the target of the investigating commission's criticism. The chief of staff. Lt. Gen. David Elazar, rightly recognized that he had no option but to step down. With him into retirement went several lower ranking staff officers.

For many of the world's young democracies, such an upheaval at the top of the military staff would be a traumatic event In itself, even if the country were not under daily artillery barrage from a long-hostile neighbor. For Israells, it is not the extent or the harshness of the official criticism against

> This sentiment arises from a fundamental doctrine of the Israell armed forces, embodied in the Hehrew command "Aharai"-"Follow me." In tactics this familiar order means that the commander always moves into attack in front of his men. In broader terms. "aharai" implies that those at the top assume full responsibility for whatever happens under their authority.

> As a former chief of staff, Mr. Dayan himself helped to elevate this military doctrine to the level of a national tradition. On that tradition, influential members of Mrs. Meir's own Labor party-to say nothing of the parifamentary opposition-are stepping up their outspoken criticism of the top leadership and demanding at least that the defense minister recognize that he cannot shirk all responsibility for last fall's acknowledged policy errors, which cost the nation so dearly. A U.S. Fable of the Other Henry

By James Reston

WASHINGTON-Once upon a W time—this was away back in April of 1974—the human race suddenly feli into a terrible slump. Everyone, it seemed, was striking out. Nobody could even draw a walk. Nations lost the art of doing what they had done well for centuries. Old friends and allies fell apart, and all heroes vanished from the face of the earth.

The seasons changed. Clocks ran out of time, and it was dark in the morning when it should have been bright and golden with sunshine. The British lost the art of government and even of sailing ships on the seven seas. American ran out of gas. The Middle East forgot the pity and religion of their fathers. The Chinese denounced Confucius, And the French lost their skipper and their logic.

Even worse, Larry Csonka, Paul Warfield and Jim Klick, the last of the professional fcotbali heroes of the Florida peninsula in North America, deserted their faithful multitude in Miami and fled for money to a foreign land. Greed and selfishness prevailed. Daughters left their grieving par-

Glorious Past

Then a strange thing happened. The meiancholy present suddenly caught up with the glorious past. There was a black man of that time, Henry Aaron by name, fuli of years and the cunning of the ages, who equalled one of the spectacular baseball achievements of all time. In a vast arena, before a throng in a place called Cincinnati, he hit a 3-and-1 pitch, which is not the sort of pitch a sensible man is supposed to consider, out of the green area of chemical turf (grass had gone out of style in that advanced age) and over the chemical fence.

It was a simple act, really. He merely drew a bead on it, like David on Goliath and demonstrated that all men are mortal, even the Babe. Later, in another place, the man called Babe, whose name was taken from the billical character Ruth, told the late Arthur Daley of The New York Times, who was with him in that place, that it didn't mean much to him now and that actually he was very pleased.

The reaction to this stroke of personal skill, patience and persistence was sudden and spectacular. The pessimism of the time vanished, Larry MacPhail, who had brought light to that old German city ou the Ohio River, said he was sorry the home run (tying Babe Ruth's total of 714 homers) had not bounced off the old laundry roof outside left field in the old Crosley Field, and that Bob O'Farrell, Chick Hafey, Leo Durocher, Red Barber and the rest of his old Rhineland buddles hadn't been there to see it, but like the Babe, he was happy,

To Believe Again Meanwhile, there was a transformation in the great Republic. People began to believe again in the possibility of heroes and institutions. Baseball, the dying national sport, revived. Its commiswho had ordered Henry Aaron to command the lightning on opening day, began to feel like the late Kenesaw Mountain Landis, the last benevolent dictator of American sport.

Even Washington, which has lately been staggering and blundering in both politics and sports, suddenly realized that all the problems of life might be a little easier if only you had somebody called Henry-Kissinger or Aaron Something human had revived the spirit of Washington, a sense of history and a sense of humor The outsiders had made Wash-ington smile again—Henry the Kissinger with his wedding and Henry the lovely old geezer, the's

40), with his home run. Everything then fell into place. The Congress took heart. The courts began to insist on the law. The President finally figured out his income tax and agreed to fork over. The herring began to run up the Potomac, and even into Rock Creek, defying the pollution. And miraculously, the daffodils, the azalias, the cherry blossoms, and the willows on the balcony of the Kennedy Center began to bloom again. It was a miracle—the first since Nixon's comeback in 1968. In the House of Representatives, the Judiciary Committee went about its work. The tax committee and the Internal Revenue Service put out the facts on the President as if he were a carcless or conniving butcher in Chicago, trying to save a few extra bucks. So the idea began to get around in Washington that maybe the system wasn't a fraud after all. maybo there were some heroes and some triumphs that could be equalled or even broken. The news from the locker room in Cincinnati was that Henry Asron didn't exactly have any of this in mind, but here in the Three-Eye League, everybody is cheering. For sports proved in some ways to be better a little better after Henry hit it over the fence.

'A Siren's Call?

Détente: Some Qualms And Difficult Questions

By Matthew B. Ridgway

Pritsburgh - "Détente," I believe, poses the potentially gravest danger to our nation of all the problems we face. Whether it is to prove a siren's call to lure us to our destruction, or the first long step toward defusing the terrible threat of nuclear warfare and worldwide holocaust, no man can today predict with any assurance But what any reasoning person can clearly perceive is the distinct possibility that treaties can be abrogated or ignored, that solemn undertakings by the Soviet lead-ership can be deliberately flouted or repudiated, and that an overnight reversion to the hard-line policies of a former Soviet gov-ernment can take place.

Safeguards

Against these possibilities this country must have ample safeguards, for we are dealing not with the fate of our own nation, though that may well be what we are doing, but with the fate of a civilization, the fate of the fundamentals nn which our nation and the free world have built that civilization through two

What must be done is to critically and coidly examine and analyze every facet of this problem through the widest practi-cable public debate and then to make basic decisions and formulate policy guidelines.

Portunately, it appears that an assessment of where we may be going, for what reasons, and for what guarantees of national ben-efits, is being made, constructively, by highly qualified individuals, in and out of government, whose intellectual honesty, integrity, competence and devotion to our country command respect.

Trust Needed

There can be no real lessening of tensions except in an atmosphere of mutual trust. Such trust does not exist. Positive action, not mere words, by the Soviet government will be required over an extended period to create such trust. For America's part, I fail to see how it can exist in view of the unrelieved evidence of the actions taken and the courses pursued by the Soviet government over the last ed fundamental objective of spreading its form and concept of government through world-in short, of its aim of world domination.

Would it be in the interests of the United States to extend long-term credits to the Soviet Union for the development and marketing of Siberian oil and gas reserves in exchange for soviet promises to let America share them at fair prices years hence; to furnish technology that we have developed and that the Russians lack and eagerly seek; to continue to pare U.S. military strength while the Soviet Union continues to augment its own in the nuclear and conventional fields, as it has been doing for the last five years; to consent to the present disparity in nuclear capabilities brought about by our 1972 agreement on limiting stra. tegic weapons, to agree to a common percentage in the reduction of armed forces in Europe, leaving the Soviet Union in its present position of greater strength—another Soviet proposal?

These are hard questions of immense significance to us and to the free world. They demand hard thinking.

Intense Flame

Under the vision of those who established our form of government, mankind's fires of Imagina. tion were kindled. They burned with an intense flame and spread nver much of the world. They have yet to be extinguished. But now in the continuing erosion of morals and ethics, and in the apathy and muddled thinking of many of our own people today, they have been allowed to burn dangerously low.

We now have before us, in our greatest hour for two centuries, an opportunity to show the world whether we are determined to keep those fires burning; whether we shall be found too lacking in integrity, too weak in moral courage, too timid in planning, too irresolute in execution to set before Almighty God and mankind an example of those principles, faithfully adhered to on which our Founding Fathers staked "their lives, their fortunes, and their sacred honor"-whether we will show the world an example ni what in our hearts we know is eternally right.

In this Bicentennial era, the choice is ours to make.

President Georges Pompidou had a special reason for remaining at France's helm in the Elysée Palace until almost at the last instant, he stole off like a wounded bear to die in his own lair on Paris's lovely Tle St. Louis.

That special reason is easily stated: to insure that Socialist leader François Mitterrand and his left-wing coalition with the Communists should be prevented from taking power. Only nine months ago the President told me in a long conversation, during which he looked more vigorous than had become his wont: "If I had to make the decision today I would stand for office again in 1976. The reason is very simple I don't want to run the risk that Mitterrand might succeed me. He is capable but he is an ally of the Communists and that is too dangerous."

I recalled that he had often described Mitterrand to me as "a fascist of the ieft." Pompidou smiled somberly, adding: "That's exactly right. I still believe it."

Young and Old

Re Willim F. Buckley's column, "America's Young and Its Old" Narch 26: We share Mr. Buckley's deep concern for the problem of the aged, but find that he fails to demonstrate a similar understanding of the problems and needs of youth. Only equal consideration of the needs of both can reveal the rich possibilities for creative synthesis in Mr. Buckley's proposal.
Although labeled voluntary.

this proposal is essentially coercive for college students wishing to matriculate. Under such conditions, students are likely to feel emploited, especially if other sectors of society are not asked to "colunteer" as well. Why not genuinely voluntary, society-wide participation in needed humantarisn services? Each sector could contribute its own resources, Thus, a large corporation might help build a rursing home which young people and community volunteers would staff. Applying Buckley's definition of "voluntary" service to nther sectors reveals a fundamental oversight in his analysis. Imagine requiring a corporation to build one nursing home before its stock could resume trading on the N.Y. Stock Exchangel The young, like corporations, deserve a fair re-turn on their investment. Truly voluntary participation by all clements of society must be encommend with tangible incentives

Buckley discusses the advantages of a year of public service for precollege students, bnt doesn't consider the possibility of program of equal benefit to high school graduates not going nn to college. A voluntary year of service could be of great value as a transition year in which to grow into adult roles and responsibilities. A strong incentive would be to guarantee financial independence, perhaps by subsi-family and fulfill often frustrated dealres to become more independent and productive members of society. Shared housing could provide the basis for an educative as well as supportive social context during the transition year, and, most importantly, such a community could beighten an appreciation of collective as well as personal service. Buckley's idea of using free youth labor is a simple economic solution to the costly problem of the aged. But only a program of worthwhile incentive to voluntary service from all levels of society creates a humanising structure which especially benefits "America's Young and Its Old," both tragically isolated elements of society.

> Despite protests from the Thais, the traffic on the road is light and there is little evidence that the road is being used to supply the insurgency among Meo tribesmen in Thailand's northern provinces in a significant way.

> The primary beneficiaries of the road appear to be the Laotian hill tribes who live along it. Tho Chinese have reportedly helped improve egriculture in the region and have created markets for the hill people to sell their goods in China. Also, the Chinese have not conscripted local labor as have the North Vietnamese and the Pathet Lao.

Now that Laos has formed a coalition government with the Communist Pathet Lao diplomats and officials here are wondering what will be the future of the Chinese roads in the northwest. While in China in 1961, Prince Souvanna Phouma, now Laotian premier, apparently approved of a plan whereby the Chinese would build a road from China's Yunnan Province to Phong Saly, the northernmost province in Lacs on the Chinese and North Vietnamese borders. Construction on this road began in 1962—a momentous year for both China and Laos. President John Kennedy had decided the previous year to withdraw U.S. support from the Lantisn right wing in favor of a neutralist solution and an international conference on Laos was convened in Geneva. The three princes of Laos, Prince Boun Oun for the right,

The decision to puil the liner out of service was made before the death of President Georges Pompidou last Tuesday and the new presidential campaign. The move had touched off sharp protests in the leftist opposition and intrade union circles.

These events may have caused the Chinese to worry about their entire southern flank. The Americans had demonstrated their ability to move troops quickly into the regioo and the Americans were already embarked on an extensive road building project of their own in northeast Thailand.

Thus the decision to build more roads in Laos may have been defensive rather than offensive. If China were to be threatened by a hostile power, it would just as soon meet the enemy before it reached Chinese soil, as in Kores. In the late 1960s, with the Americans fully engaged in Indo-china, with Americans bombing eastern Laos and U.S.-paid mercenaries active in the north, the Chinese began pushing another road down from Yunnan Province to the town of Muong Sai, which was a major Pathet Lao headquarters in the northwest. THE ART MARKET

What Lies Behind the Record-Breaking London Sales

By Souren Melikian

ONDON, April 5 (IHT).-With the two most important auctions of the spring season following closely on the extraor-Vever sale (IHT, March 23-24, Sotheby's is riding high.

Monday and Tuesday the London auction house held the most successful sale of Chinese porcelain ever. It was there that the world record price for any work of art aside from pictures was set at £420,000—the price paid for a Chinese Ming bottle of the early 15th century (IHT, April On Tuesday night this was followed by the controversial auction of the Santamarina collection of impressionists which came within inches of causing a row between the Eritish government and Argentina: the day before the sale, Argentine officials were still trying to prevent the sale because the collection had allegadly been taken out of Argenting without on export liceuse. Peter Wilsou, Sotheby's chairmen of the board and probably England's ablest auctioneer, held the hammer, emphasizing the scrious-ness of the occasion. Yet the contrast between the highly successful Chinese sale and the impressionist sale, in spite of some record prices, was dominated by the mysterious personality of an anonymous collector and spiced by the presence of the Japanese after their silence on the market scene.

According to professional sources, the collector, whose existence had not so far been mentioned in any publication or public statement by auction room tugal." He is said to have been first interested in Chinese export ware known to English collectors as trade porcelain and to Amer-ican and French buyers as Compagnie des Indes. He is believed to have bought, among other things, most of the major birdshaped tureens which have come past few years. From 18th-csntury trode porculain, he moved on to carlier objects. He was the one who paid a record price for a Chinese porcelain in June. 1970, when a 14th-century wine jar sold at Christie's for £220,500.

Record Broken

On Tuesday afternoon, according to the same sources, he broke this record by buying through a dealer the £420,000 bottle. Both pieces were so out of the or-dinary es to etrip the prices paid for them of any general significance. The bottle in blue and white enamels decorated with a dragon, auctioned Tuesday, is by up on the auction market in the far the most beautiful of three examples known in the world.

> The anonymous collector-he never appears at auctions in person nor does he ever buy from the trade to better conceal his identity-was apparently not the only one who thought so: Giuseppe Eskenazi, the well-known London specialist in top-range early Chinese ceramics, bid up to £400,000 before dropping out. But the intervention of such a determined collector, who is thought to have unlimited wealth, had a great impact on the sale, generally speaking. He also bought according to the same sources the superb blue and white mel p'ing, another blue and white vase of the Yung-lo period, as was the record bottle, for £160,000. Again this was a fine piece, rank-ing in beauty only with those given in the early 17th century by Shah Abbas to the Persian shrine of Ardebil from which they were transferred to the Tehran Archaeological Museum some years ago. A third notable piece, less rare but perfect in its way, went to him for £38,000.

The other unexpected buyer in the sale was Antonio Costs, a Lisbon dealer who makes few appearances at Chinese auctions but buys a lot when he does. He fought against Romognoii of Milan for a Tang horseman, which he got at £16,000, bought another Tang horseman rather better, I thought, for £15,000 and some rather ugly Tang figures of two dignitaries, respectively 83 and 85 centimeters high, for £7,000.

More Interesting More interesting still was the active bidding of two Japanese huyers, a dealer and a private collector. The dealer, Goro Sakamoto, who runs the Fugendo Co. in Tokyo bought the large 41-cen-timeter-high blue and white vase made in the second half of the 14th century for £170,000. The collector, Seijiri Matsucka of Tokyo, acquired two fine blue and white bowls, both of the early Ming period, for £15,000 and £6,000 respectively and a very good wine jar made about 1500 with relief decoration in poly-chrome enamels of the so-called Fa-Huz type for £20,000. Both had been bidding enthusiastically the week before at the auction of Henri Vever's Japanese prints. Obviously the Japanese are still in the market. They have now heen joined by Hong Kong Chinese, dealers and private buyers: A good blue and white dish of the early 15th century was bought for £22,000 by T.Y. Chow, a shipping merchant who collects por-

In contrast, the impressionist sale (IHT, April 4) held Tuesday night was less successful. It started brilliantly when an oil by Honoré Daumier, 14,5 by 13 centimeters, a study of three lawyers, made a surprising £15,000. This was followed by a stunning £60,000 paid by the Leferre Galleries of Bruton Street for a brilliant cartoon in watercolor and gouache, 17.5 by 21.5 cen-timeters. But then the auction floundered a bit: £65,000 was not all that much for an important preparatory study in oil 45 hy 55 centimeters by Eugène Delacroix, dated 1859, And a marvelous self-portrait of Henri Fantin-Latour, 37 by 33 centimeters, painted in 1861, sold miserably at £6,000. A very good landscape of Claude Monet's best period, the years following his "Impression de Solell Levant" to which the impressionist movement owed its name, made only £55,000. These failures were, it is true, compensated by the high prices world record for the artist was broken when Colnaghi's of London paid £210,000 for a large pastel and gouache 60 by 80 cen-timeters. Another Toulouse-Lantree, in oil, sold later for £205,000. The artist's tiny sketches reached absurd prices which were in pro-portion, much higher still. His minute, hadly preserved self-portrait, 19 by 12 centimeters, in pastel soared to £28,000.

Nevertheless, several profes-sionals seemed worried as they realized, all of a sudden, that the wonderful impressionists, supposedly as good as gold, could come a cropper on occasion. This will certainly disturb some of the investment funds too who have been banking on impressionism

The sale was held under ideal circumstances with inflation prodding bidders and much publicity because of the Argentine government's vain attempt to halt the auction. A film about the collection had been shown on TV before the sale, It may be added that almost every item had a superb pedigree. This worked in some cases and didn't in others: This provides dealers with something to think about.

This is a remarkable exhibition of 74 works by Paul Klee, many of which belong to private collections and have never been shown before. As soon as one realizes that content has virtually no importance in Klee's work, except as a sort of accessory, one discovers how essentially Klee was an artist, sensitively aware of the aesthetic potential of his material, the rhythm and direction it suggests to the mind of the viewer. The show gives eloquent testimony to the artist's diversity, his ability to use whatever language he chose without stepping outside himself. It is, also, a constant pleasure to the

They compose a weirdly organized space into which the mind may project tunneled vistes, as though one were trapped inside a camera's diaphragm and each small blade were a potential guillotine. His recent work appears both more schematic and more mordant than that of his exhibition in the same gallery in

Anouilh Play Makes Debut In Muddled, Muddied Version

LONDON, April 5 (IET) -Another new small theater has opened in London. Following the Regent Theatre near Oxford Circus, where Lindsay Kemp has pitched his camp, comes the Theatre at New End in Hampstend, perhaps the only part of this city that doesn't need an extra accitorium.

Still, it's welcome, for all that, even if the first production, the British premiers of Jean Anouith's "You Were So Sweet When You Where Little," first seen in Paris some 18 months ago, muddles and muddles an in-irguing play. The theater itself has been converted from a hospital mortury and is a tiny oblong room with steeply raked tiers of seats occupying about half the space and some rows of benches taking up another quarter so that the main acting space for this production was one corner of the room, with another smaller area between the seats and the benches.

From my seat, cramped on a bench, it was impossible to see the actors in the secondary area, and some of the action in the main arena (to dignify the minute space in which the actors had to turn sideways to pass each other) was also invisible although I was within 6 feet of the performers. To add to the discomfort, the amplification system—switched on throughout for a few seconds of inaudible gabbling from a chorus emitted a hum loud enough to drown the quieter passages and distract at the most impassioned

Teething Troubles

These are, I hope, teething troubles. What was discouraging was the inept acting of some of the cast, maybe unnerved by the nearness of the audience and the unfinished feeling of the production by the theater's artistic director Misha Williams.

The play itself is subtitled Variations on the 'Choepheri' of Aeschylus" and deals in cumning fashion with the familiar story of Orestes' return to avenge the death of his father, Agamemnon, by killing his mother, Clytemnestra, and her lover, Aegisthus. Anoulih'e characters dwell in a sort of hell, actors condemned.

each day to re-enact this moment of tragedy, with their actions commented upon by a chorus of accompanying musicians who at first dismiss the high-flying passions around them and then take on the characteristics of the turies and attack Orestes.

It is an approach that allows the author to stand back and manipulate the play, shifting perspectives to great effect, at one point robbing Orestes and the rest of their tragic dimencions, at another raising more ordinary suffering to the level of the Greek heroes. The musicians emphasize that their lives are as tragic as any but no ticularly a red Indian scene with one takes notice of them. The play's central confronta-

ON THE arts agenda

A new production of Frank Martin's "Der Sturm," based on Shakespeare's "The Tempest," will have its first performance April 6 at the Zurich Opera, conducted by Matthias Aeschbacher, staged by Lars Runsten, design-ed by Toni Businger and with choreography by Geoffrey Cauley. In the cast are Renata Lenhart, Teresa Martin, Howard Nelson, Rudiger Wohlers and Nigel Donglas. The work had its Swiss premiere in 1959 at the Zurich Opera. Later performances of the new staging will be on April 10, 17, 21 and 26.

Janacek's "Katya Kabanova" will enter the repertory of the Vienna State Opera for the first time on April 19 in a production staged by Joachim Herz and designed by Rudolf Heinrich. Janos Kulka will conduct a cast headed by Antigone Sgourds in the title part, Astrid Varnay, Peter Lindros, Waldemar Kmentt, Oskar Czerwenka, Günter Neumann and Gertruda Jahn. Later performan-ces are scheduled for April 22, 26 between parent and child: Clytemnesirs and her lover Agasthus on one side, and her murderous children Orestes and Electra on the other. Within this, Anoulih keeps shifting the balance, allowing both idealistical-

ly youthful denunciations of middle-aged compromise and middle-aged regrets at the cruelty of the young. Aegisthus identifies himself with Orestes and welcomes the knife thrust that ends his life. There are references both to the student uprising of 1968 and to the French way with Nazi sympathizers at the end of the war.

The only person to whom he denies sympathy is Electra, the one incorruptible character. The play opens with her waiting for s to come and ends after the killings and tragedy as tha other actors prepare to go home with her waiting for the cyclic events to begin again. She is unchanging through hate.

Angela Pleasance's performance is overwhelming in the small theater—passion becomes her just as Paul Jones's Orestes underwhelms. Margaret Robertson and Andrew Crawford effectively convey the regrets of middle age.

The Actors Company seems addicted to the Edwardian era. After their successful updating of "Tis a Pity She's a Whore." they have given a similar 1900s treatment to Congreve's "The Way of the World," as part of their season at the Wimbledon Theatre, with markedly inferior Karen Mills's dowdy sets are not much help. The opening scene, now set in a London club rather than coffee house, looks as if it takes place in the Brighton Line cloakroom at Victoria Station. Congreve's effortfully witty minor characters such as Petulant and Witwound will not transform into Edwardian swells, despite the efforts of Matthew Long and John Tordoff.

Although director David William has wrecked a play depend-ing on close social observation, he has achiered an often funny production by encouraging some broadly humorous playing, John Woodvine's rustic Sir Wilfol, causing acute embarrassment to everyone except himself, is a particular delight, and Margery Mason makes Lady Wishfort into an endearingly silly person.
Caroline Blakiston's Millament is pert and Edward Petherbridge's Mirabell grave.

Any young television-oriented child—which means any young child—will enjoy "The Yogi Bear Show" at the Victoria Palace, despite a convoluted story line to get not only Yogi, but Hockleberry Hound and the Flintstones into the same show. There are talks in a comic Asian Indian manner.

If you can take sentimental ballads sung by a 6-foot-tall bear in a mini-skirt, there are a couple of excellent country-style numbers by Mel Williams as well as some pleasing notempo songs.

The larger-than-life Yogi Bear (Neale Gudrum) is the most efective character, spreading childlike sense of enjoyment that carries the show through its non sequiturs. Michael Rearson, a small and effervescent dancer, adds sparkle to several scenes

It is, though, a show that will kill theater more surely than television. Medici Baroque Art On View in Detroit

By Agis Salpukas

DETROIT (NYT) -Take the simplest thing, enrich it, make it as elaborate, beautiful and grandiose as possible and don't worry about the cost. These were the principles that Cosimo III, one of the last rulers of the Medici family, followed in trying to revive the arts in Flo-

reign of 400 years ended in 1747. Some of the best examples of the lavish works produced hy master craftsmen and artists throughout Europe to meet Cosimo's pompous artistic taste have been brought together for the first time since his reign in an exhibition at the Dertoit Institute of Art.

The exhibition, entitled "Twilight of the Medici Late Baroque Art in Florence: 1670-1743." a result of four years of scholarship and painstaking diplo-matic negotiations, Such museums as the Offizi, the Bargello and Palazzo Pitti of Flo-rence and many private collectors had to be persuaded to lend the works during a period of increas-ing art theft and vandalism. "It's getting harder and harder to put together exhibits like this," said Frederick Cummings, director of the institute, who did much of the negotiation, "There's much greater reluctance to lend things now," he added,

Dr. Cummings said that the aid that Mr. and Mrs. Henry Ford 2d had given to help to restore the art treasures of Florence damaged in the floods of 1966 had helped considerably in getting the cooperation of Italian cultural officials in letting the objects leave Italy, and in the selection of Detroit as the only place in the United States where they will be shown,

In addition to Mr. Cummings the other organizer of the show was Marco Chiarini, director of the Palazzo Pitti, where the exhibition will go after it closes

Pointing to a bronze statue of Venus lent by the Duke of Marlborough, Mr. Cummings said that the reluctance of the duke was overcome when the museum agreed to clean the statue, which had turned green from being in his garden,

Despite the difficulties, Mr. Cummings was able to round up 310 works, which include bronze and marble sculptures, paintings, tapestries, furniture, drawings, jewelry and many kinds of unusual decorative objects. Mr. Cummings, whose main interest has been the revival and eppreciation of the baroque style, knelt beside a reliquary made of gilt bronze with a roof of rock crystals containing the relies of six patron saints of Florence. shook his head and while runroque art collection now on view in Detroit. The exhibition goes to Italy this summer.

"I still find it hard to believe they sent this."

In assembling the show, Mr. Cummings was not only bucking the reluctance of curators and collectors to part with the works. but also a general neglect and lack of appreciation of the baroque art of this later period, "Much of this was forgotten and considered too extravagant." said. "It was against the modern trends of cubism, the simplicity, clean lines of the Bauhaus school," He added that the late baroque was florid and individual" as he paused before a huge canvas entitled "Allegory of the Peace Between Plorence and Fiesole," The huge painting with many strong contrasts between light and dark is filled with massive figures, such as that of Jupiter, and delicate cherubs making dramatic gestures and clothed in swirling robes, From the writings of contemporary artists, the painting is credited to Luca Giordano, but he, as even the most prominent artists at the court at that time, is not well known, Most of the art commissioned by Cosimo III was meant to impress visiting foreign rulers and officials and to express the principles of plety and absolutism. While the arts flourished from the patronage of Cosimo III and sons, Ferdinando and Giovanni Gastone, from 1670 to 1743, death of his daughter, Ann Maria Luisa, Florence was in decay, The government was in chaos, hungry peasants and bandits roamed the country-side and daily public executions had little effect in stemming the violence.

A visitor to Florence in 1720 wrote: "The people of Florence are very highly tax'd; there is an imposition laid upon every thing they either wear or eat; and to keep the people in awe and restrain them from entering into any seditious discourses, there were spies in all companies; and the Cannon in the castle, which were pointed towards the city. were always ready charg'd in case of any popular insurrection,"

But the chaos did not interfere with the production of 100 artists and craftsmen who turned out opulent works for the court. There was often so much that ning his hand over the work, when the dynasty ended with the some works were not displayed such as four tapestries depicting the four elements-earth, fire, air, water-in human forms Even today, the tapestries appear unfaded and look as if they had just come from the workshop.

Wherever possible, works that were in the same rooms in the paleces and homes are exhibited together, giving the viewer some idea of the total effect.

After the exhibition closes or June 2, it will go to the Palazzo Pitti, where it will reopen in mid-July for 13 weeks. The display here is being sponsored by the city of Florence and the Detroit Institute of Arts and is supported by the Founders Society of the Detroit Institute, the Eleanor and Edsel B. Company Fund, and by a grant

World Prices For Metals Seen Falling

UN Panel Forecasis Food Cost Rise

GENEVA. April 5 (Reuters) .-United Nations economists fore-cast today that prices of rubber. copper, iron ore, tin, manganese ore, bauxite, alumina and alumihum are likely to fall later this

But prices for wheat and rice will probably remain high declin-ing slightly later in the year, a preliminary assessment by econ-emists of the United Nations Conference on Trade and Devel-opment (UNCTAD) said.

Tea prices are expected to he substantially higher, and a slight average rise is foreseen in cocoa prices, Sugar prices may decline moderately in the second half of the year, but coffee prices are unlikely to average much less than in 1973.

Prices for vegetable ollseeds and oils are expected to go down, hut on average will still be above inst year's ievels, the UNCTAD survey said.

The economists said their forc-casts were based partially on estimates that overall economic expansion in major industrialized countries was unlikely to exceed

1 percent this year.
The expected decline in industrial activity in major importing countries is likely to cause a fall in the price of natural rubber and many metals.

The UNCTAD survey predicted that wheat prices would continue to rise till aiter the North American and other Northern Hemisphere harvests. World rice production is ex-pected to be about 5 percent up on last year, and more will be available for export, the survey

Burns Vows to Defend Dollar Exchange Value

By Hobart Rowen

WASHINGTON, April 5 (WP). -- Federal Reserve chairman Arthur Burns warned yesterday that the United States will not allow the dollar to sink to an undervalued level that would worsen the inflation problem at home.

He revealed to the House subcommittee on international fi-nance that the U.S. government intervened in exchange markets in February and March "to moderate abrupt movements in exchange rates and to prevent the emergence of disorderly conditions" on the markets.

Presumably, the United States bought dollars with German marks or other currencies to prevent the dollar rate from going down further, We in the United States certainly cannot accept with equanimity exchange-rate movements that clearly undervalue the dollar," Mr. Burns added, "Nor would our trading partners want us to do that,"

Such a policy should make it possible for the fires of inflation to hurn themselves out, while it at the same time provides the financial basis for the resumption of orderly economic growth," he told the House subcommittee. Mr. Burns explained that under a floating rate system the consequences of inflation "may he worse than they would have been" under fixed exchange re-lationships

With flooting rates, he said, the dollar depreciates when the rate of inflation moves higher here than abroad, resulting in higher costs for imported goods and in higher prices of domestic sub-

This intensification of the inflation problem "cannot take place (under fixed rates) so long as international receives remain sufficient to obviate the need for devaluation," Mr. Burns deciar-

The dollar has declined "appreciably" in world markets since the end of January, he pointed out. At that time, the sverage dollar price of 10 other major currencies was only 11 percent above the level of spring, 1970. In July, 1973, those same cur-rencies were 33 percent higher. By last week, the dollar had gone down and the other cur-rencies up so that the group of foreign currencies was 20 percent higher than the spring of 1970. Mr. Burns was optimistic on the prospects that the United States and other major countries would reach agreement this summer on "basic principles and broad features" of a reformed international monetary system.

for bank loans here since the week ended June 17, 1970, when they rose a record of $793 million. For a non-tax-payment week, the latest increase was probably the higgest ever.

Bank loans in New York have now thereased for six consecutiva weeks, making their cumulative rise some $2.92 hillion.

In Chicago, major hanks show-ed a $147-million increase in commercial and industrial loans for the latest week. As a result, such hank losms there are up about $1.39 hillion since the year-end, an increase that is now running ahead of a year ago.

Part of this unexpected demand for bank credit apparently is coming from corporations that are shifting away from the commercial paper market to hanks. The volume of commercial paper outstanding declined during the week ended March 27—the fourth consecutive drop-bringing the cumulative decrease in paper outstanding to some $1.98 hillon.

Interest rates on commercial paper, notes for loans that corporations make to each other or to other short-term investors, have been climbing faster than the rates banks charge on loans. serve Bank of New York has moved from 8.58 percent to 9.10 percent to 9.45 percent over tha

By Hilmi Toros

ROME, April 5 (APr.—Italy's Fiat, a multinational empire entrenehed on five continents, faces a bumpy road ahead. The road may even be downhill for the auto maker that has put cars on the streets of Moscow, trucks in the Sahara and tractors in the heartland of Flat's problem iles at home, where it is Italy's biggest private enterprise, employing around 200,000 persons, and is struggiling to remain profitable-and private. But the screws are being tightened from both ends: From a government admittedly committed to favor labor over manngement, and from a labor movemeot determined to bleed the "padroni"-bosses to hankruptcy unless it gets virtually all it demands.

For the first time in 25 years Flat ehowed a loss last year oi 30 billion lire ($45 million). A year earlier, the automaker had recorded a net profit of 16 hillion lire under the direction of the Agnelli brothers—Glovanni and Umberto-who have run the company with the firm belief that when Flat sneezed the entire lialian comomy caught cold. But now even Fiat has caught cold. And unless its engines heat up, Flat's international operations can suffer too. Imposed Wage Increase

Last month the government, called in by Fiat to mediate a new labor contract, imposed a settlement that raised the salary of assembly line workers and foremen alike by $30 a month. In deadlocked negotiations, Fiat had offered an $18-a-month increase. The unions had demanded $38.

The mediator, Labor Minister Luigi Bertoldi, a Marxist socialist, openly admitted that the settlement was too important to be ruled by economics alone. He called it a "political" accord. But Umberto Agnelli, 39-yearold managing director, protested: Mat lost because a burden was imposed on it which it cannot carry." The company estimates that the new contract will cost the firm an additional 100 hillion lire ahnually at a time when

Umberto finda less to argue about with labor than with government, "There is no economic planning," he said last month as he threatened to resign. "There is no consistent framework within which to operate."

think that you understand a thing of beauty by couoting up its molecules-that William Faulkner's genius is ultimately to be ap-prehended in the oumbers he scribbled on his manuscript pages to record how many words he had written so far: or in the events that happened to occur on the day when as a young boy he was moved by his family from Ripley to Oxford, Miss.; or in the hiccups that Faulkner hiecupped and cured by flying in an airplane upside down! in the autumn of 1931. Worse, Prof. Biotner seems to believe that you re-create that thing of beauty by arranging its molecules in an endless straight line-that the shape of Faulkner's life can be imitated by putting the events that occurred during his childhood, the scribbled page num-bers, and the hiccups in chronological order, without regard for proportion, drama, or signifi-cance, And if you happen to have known the thing of beauty per-sonally, as Prof. Blotner knew Faulkner during the last years of the novelist's life, then all the more opportunity and excuse for counting and lining up mole-harpoon this blubbery biography by this professor of English ar the University of Michigan. One could point out some of Prof. Blotner's more abourd excesses for instance, his interweaving of the plot of "Absalom, Absalom!" with Faulkner's ex-periences in Hollywood while writing it, with the unappetizing result that we are forced to reof the Sutpens' and Compsons' tragedy while almost simultaneously digesting the news that Darryl F. Zanuck got his start at Warner Brothers writing scripts "for the German shepberd star, Rin-Tin-Tin"!. One could sample some of the more mindless trivia the peculiar smell of Faulkner's trench coat) and some of the more inane transition sentences Blotner works hard for graceful non sequiturs!. And thank God Faulkner was private and tacitum, and did not leave behind even more for his hiographer to chew up and regurmiate.

So it would be simple sport to

In short, Prof. Blotner provides me with the ideal opportunity to curse a form of biography I have ridiculed many times before . . . except for one embarrassing fact: despite all my efforts to skim it as rapidly as possible, I found myself reading "Faulkner" slowly, and with considerable interest too. For the truth is that no matter how mindlessly it is handled, Faulkner's life remains intensely a'osorbing.

First of all, he was not the sort of writer whose whole career was spent in a brown study. He was proud to be a writer, but he spurned the role of "literary man" and took equal price in flying airplanes, hunting game, riding horses, sailing boats, farming land, building things with his hands and raising a family indeed, anyone who regards TOSEPH BLOTNER is one of those biographers who seem to Faulkner and Hemingway as being cootrasting types to their attitudes toward manly activityand perhaps danger, too-will have to revise his opinioo after reading "Faulkner". Moreover. there was his habit of creating romantic personae for it was oot until late in his life that he finally dropped his pretense of having been wounded in World War II. There was his extraordinary drinking routine, which helped to kill him in the end. And there was his per-sonality, which generated an extraordinarily rich and amusing lore of anecdotes.

Second of all, Faulkner's career still stands as the archetypal American writer's experience-at least for those who grew up a generation or two behind him. As much as any other American of this century, be was the dreamer born into middle-class environs who forged his art despite a father who did not understand him and a home town that often mocked him. More so than most, he was the artist who had to sell out to Hollywood to support himself and suffer for it (unlike F. Scott Fitzgerald, Faulkner's health a vived the ordeal; unlike countless others, his artistic integrity stayed intact). And uniquely, he was rooted in the history and locale he grew up in, and had the wisdom not to abandon it in his art.

Finally, that rootedness of Paulkner's proves to be the crowning inadvertent asset of this biography. For it prevents Prof. Blotner from ever deviating too far from relevance. No matter how far back in history he may wander to fill in the Faulkner genealogy and no matter how wide of Faulkner's personal story he may roam, be is still writing about Faulkner's art. Even when he meanders back to the Civil War career of Faulkner's great - grandfather, Col. William Clark Falkner [sic]. or drifts to the political activities of Theodore G. Bilbo and Huey Long, be is still enlarging our understanding of what went in-to Paulkner's fiction. And when this stops being the case in the second half of the biography, it no longer matters: we are too caught up to care.

Perhaps Prof. Blotner knew from the beginning that he could not really go wrong. Perhaps he did not even have to know, but sensed instinctively that his obsession with Faulkner would carry him through. If so, I owe bim far more credit than I have given him bere. Still, he has gambled so recklessly with his readers' patience that no matter how much he has won I prefer to think of him as iucky-the author of a monumeotally inept book that deviates inadvertently into sense.

INGLEWOOD, Calif. April 5 (UPI) —Kareem Abdul-Jabhar's 31 points and a tough Milwaukee defense crushed the Los Angeles Lakers last night, 115-90, giving the Bucks a 3-1 lead in the NBA Western Conference semifinal playoff series.

Milwaukee can wrap up the series at home Sunday night. The Bucks beat Los Angeles by four and 19 points in the first two games there last week, Jabbar, the NBA's most valuable player, scored all his points in the first three quarters as Milwaukee opened up a commanding 86-53 lead.

Forward Bob Dandridge scored 24 points in the same span of time and added a basket in the fourth quarter before Milwaukee pulled all of its starters. Gail Goodrich, the NBA's fifth best scorer with a 25.4 average, was held to two points, a career lnw. Ha made only one of 10 field-goal attempts.

Intercontinental Basketball Plans

MUNICH April 5 (Rsuters) .-Tite introduction of an international basketball competition, linking Europe and the American continents, is being planned.

The first European Cup for uational teams, to be held between May 25 and June 12, is expected to become the fore-runner of a more adventurous expansion, part of a plan to establish an intercontinental champlonship at national level. A similar competition is being considered for North and South America, with leading teams in each championship eventually hattling for an intercontinental

Play was suspended for 69 minutes during the afternoon and was halted for the day with 23 golfers still on the 7,021-yard, par-71 Sedgefield Country Club course.

Thompson, the longball-hitting

North Carolinian, built his 65 around a 45-foot chip shot for an eagle 3 on the 495-yard, par-5 minth bole. He also made four birdies and got what he called "the best break of my golfing career" when he pull-hooked his drive on the 17th hole. The ball lilt a eart path, bounced across a bridge and out into the fairwoy.

Hiskey said he worrled constantly that the round would be canceled. He knocked in seven hirdle putts and took a bogey 5 on the 463-yard second hole when he three-putted. He ran in 30 and 40-footers on Nos. 1 and 10. Rudolph and Charles shot their 65s before the rainstorm. They finished about six hours aliend of Thompson and Hiskey. Grouned behind the leaders with 66s were Lee Trevino, George Kniidson, Jim Jamleson and Bohby Ployd.

Charles had no hogies and sank six birdie putts, the longest a 30-footer on the 457-yerd, par-4 fifth hote. Charles went out in three-under 33 and came in with Six nations, Italy, Yugoslavia, West Germany, France, Greeca and Turkey-will compete in the new European tournament, playing in a home-and-away series. Mr. Jones says: "This year's first competition is still something of an experiment. But I'm sure it will be successful and that next time we will be able to have 12 nations taking part.

"After all, jet travel has made It so easy to go between cities in Europe and this has npened up all sorts of possibilities for basketball competition Interna-tional basketball is extremely popular and there is absolutely no reason why this new competition should not be successful."

The European Cup tournament will be held every second year, alternating with the European International Championships, which will continue in their present form-hosted by one country and staged in much the same way as the World Soccer Cup finals. Mr. Jones gave the program for the European Cup as follows: May 22: West Germany vs. France, Turkey vs. Yugoslavia, Greece vs. Italy; May 24: West Germany vs. Yugoslavia, Turkey vs. Greece, France vs. Italy; May 25: West Germany vs. Italy, Yugoslavia vs. Greece, France vs. Turkey; May 29: West Germany vs. Greece, Italy vs. Turkey, Yu-goslavia vs. France; May 31: West Germany vs. Turkey, Greece vs. France. NEW YORK, April 5 (NYT),-The thing I do, I have confidence in," said Ernie DiGregorio who led the National Basketball Association assists this season and helped lead the Buffalo Braves to their first playoff berth.

Responding with equal confidence yesterday, baskethall writers and broadcasters named the 23-year-old guard rookie of the year m a nearly unanimous decision. Of a possible total of 17 votes, DiGregorio received 16.033. The last comparable vote was the unanimous decision in 1970 for Karcem Abdul-Jabbar, then Lew Alcindor. Ron Behagen of the Kansas City-Omaha Kings received .700 of the only other vote-getter with .167 of a vote.

Newcombe and Smith Move To WCT-Tourney Semifinals

NEW ORLEANS, La., April 5 (AP).—Top-seeded John New-combe of Australia biltzed Cliff Richey of the United States, 6-3, 6-3, in the $50,000 World Championship Tennis tournament last night. The victory put him in the finals Sunday against second-seeded Stan Smith of the United States, the WCT defending cliar . pion, who held off a determined bld by qualifier Sid Ball, also American, to take a 7-8, 6-4 victory in an earlier match. Richey, a veteran tennis pro, made it close in the early going of the second set when he brought the match to 3-3, but Newcombe broke service in the next game, winning 40-love and roared to victory.

Smith also won by breaking Ball's service in the seventh game of the ascond set, then holding off his challenger in the eighth gama after reaching deuce four times.

By this time Burberry had turned on his vacuum cleaoer and I didn't hear bls reply. But as an accomplished lip reader, I was just as glad I couldn't.

Hand rolling cigars at Padron Cigars in Miami.

What Miami Means to U.S. Cigar Smokers

MIAMI INYT).—For clgar smokers, Miami has become to the United States what Havana is to Cuha. Hand-rolling of cigars, B vanishing craft elsewhere in the United States, flourishes here. Cuban refugees operate some 25 cigar factories, which last year sold a record of 20 million cigars. "This year we expect to sell close to 30 million handmade cigars, and our production would be even greater if we had all the expert labor we oeed," said Jose O. Padron, owner of Padron Cigars. one of the largest cigar-manufacturing concerns in Miami.

Since the import embargo in 1962 by the United States on Cuban goods, oo Havana cigars may he imported from Cuba directly or indirectly.

Cuban refugees, who now number close to 400,000 in the Miami area, brought with them cigar-making skills. In small workshops at first, they began hand-rolling cigars for what in the mid-1960s was a limited Miami consumption. A few years later, however, workshops grew into factories that found a larger, national market not only among Cubans but also among American connoisseurs of good cigars. The growth of Miami's cigar industry has coincided with the conversion of most of Tampa's hand-rolled-cigar factories to machine manufacturing. The difference in quality between handmade and machine-made cigars, according to experts, is like that hetween a good vintage wine and vin ordinaire.

Hand-rolled clgars, in addition to having B better aroma, are elastic and soft. Machine-made ooes are tightly packed and stiff. The difference in production cost hetween the two types is considerable. A skilled worker cao roll about 200 cigars B day, while a machine makes more than 1.000 cigars an hour. Shortly after they set up their businesses Miami cigar-makers exhausted the then existing stock of Cuban tobacco. Later, they started to buy leaves from different areas of the world and to encourage planters in Central America to grow tobacco from Cuban seeds.

The supervision of tohacco-leaf sorting, curing and hlending prior to the manufacturing process is considered to be even more important than the actual bandrolling of the cigar.

The cigar consists of three wrappers. Filler, the core of the cigar, is bound by a stronger leaf and then wrapped in a thin, finely granulated leaf of uniform color. Before being packaged in boxes of 25, sometimes 50, cigars are carefully matched according to four hasic colors-double clare, the lightest, claro, natural, and maduro, the

A third-generation tobacco grower from Pinar del Rio Province in Cuba, one of tha most famous tobacco areas in the world. Mr. Padroo arrived penniless in the United States in 1962. In 1965, having saved $600 by washing dishes, gardening and working in a laundry, he hired one operator and started haod-rolling cigars, producing 5,000 in the first year. In 1973 his company sold two million cigars, and it expects to seil three million this year.

Like most other Miami factories, Padron Cigars manufactures about 10 types of cigars, from 5 1/2-inch cazadores, which retail for 35 cents each, to 9-inch gigantes, which sell for $3 each.

Also like many Miami cigar factorics, Padron Cigars is a family operation. Mr. Padron's two brothers work with him and so does his father-in-law, Vicente Matilla, who was a cigar manufacturer and grower

Among other better known Miami cigarproducing companies are Benedit Cigars. Caballero Clears, Moro Cigars and Sosa Cigars.

In recent months the Miami manufacturers have been discussing the possibility that sooner or later imports of Havana cigars and Havana tobacco would be re-

At first, many expressed fears that lifting of the embargo might affect their booming business. But upon reflection, they concluded that availability of Cuban tobacco would be beneficial for them.

Great Chili Debate PEOPLE: Simmers to a Draw

The great chili debate has simmered to a draw in Washington, D.C. The debate started two months ago with a few friendly libes on the Senate floor about the respective merits of different types of chili and ended Thursday night with a chili cookoff at the National Press Club.

Before the contest had ended, the favorite recipes of six states had been sampled and President Nixon had entered the fray to boost the chili of his native California. Actually, there were two contests, with Press Cluh members and their guests choosing one winner and a panel of "experts" — five chili aficionados — picking the second. The Press Cluh group chose the Texas recipe, to the delight of Sen. John Tower. R-Texas. The "experts" chose the Arizona chili. Sen. Barry Gold-water, R-Ariz., chortled, "The proof of the pudding is that Arizona ran out and they're still serving Texas chili." Tower shot hack: "That's a lie, Goldwater, you never could tell the turth." Goldwater: "If I told the truth, you'd never be a senator."

Tower sampled the Arizona variety and told Goldwater it tasted like heef stew. The runoer-up in hoth contests came from New Mexico. Tower told Sen. Joseph Mootoya, D-N.M., that it was all right "if you've oever tasted chili."

While Nixon did oot attend the cook-off, he seet a message saying, "I was astonished to learn that tonight's proceeding would permit inclusion of a group of Johnny-come-latelies who don't know true chili from Peking duck. I suppose that imitation is the sincerest form of flattery, and to that extent. I applaud the efforts of the distinguished senators from Texas, Arizona, Oklahoma, New Mexico, Louisiana, Ohio (Ohio?) to emulate the genius of the California chili makers."

The Rev. Philip F. Berrigan and his wife, former nun Elizabeth McAlister, are parents of a girl. The baby, born Monday, has been named Frida.

Mary Wright, a 17-year-old high school senior from Auburndale, Mass., has become the first woman to be elected national president of the Explorer programs of the Boy Scouts of America. Miss Wright defeated Gary Griffiths of Salt Lake City, 757 to 655. Thursday at an Explorer convention in Washington. Tha

Sir John Waller married time Mileham in London this seek for the money. Not her more, His money. A cousin left Sir John $500,000 12 years ago—with the proviso that he could have only the interest, not the capital until he produced a son, Sir John, 56 proposed to two women but both romances broke up before the wedding day. Then he met Miss Mileham, 30, who works in advertising. "Apart from the morey," said Sir John, "It so happens I like the lady." -SAMUEL FUSTICE
